

Macro Roundup Article

Headline: Is a Trump-Biden Rematch Inevitable?

Article Link: <https://www.natesilver.net/p/is-a-trump-biden-rematch-inevitable>

Author(s)	Nate Silver
Publication	Silver Bulletin
Publication Date	September 20, 2023

Tweet: .@NateSilver538 argues that the prediction markets are underpricing both Trump and Biden's odds of being their party's nominee.

Summary: Joe Biden is likely to be the Democratic nominee. I would put his chances in the range of 80 to 85%. Donald Trump is likely to be the Republican nominee. I would put his chances in the range of 75%. The chance of an average non-Hispanic white man of Biden's age (80) dying in the next year is about 5%. Biden's odds are presumably lower than this, however. Even if he's lost a step or two, I feel comfortable asserting that his physical and mental health are better than that of the typical 80-year-old. However, there are a lot of medical events other than Biden literally passing away that might end his bid for a second term. Overall, I figure there's a 10% chance that Trump loses the nomination in "typical" fashion, such as being caught from behind in Iowa, a 5% chance that a health-related issue ends his campaign, and a 10% chance that legal jeopardy forces Trump to reconsider or compels Republicans to turn on him, even though they haven't so far.

Related Articles: Five Reasons Why Biden Might Lose in 2024 and For Some Key Voters, Trump Has Become Toxic and How to Interpret Polling Showing Biden's Loss of Nonwhite Support

Primary Topic: Politics

Topics: Op-Ed/Blog Post, Politics

Permalink: <https://www.edwardconard.com/macro-roundup/natesilver538-argues-that-the-prediction-markets-are-underpricing-both-trump-and-bidens-odds-of-being-their-partys-nominee?view=detail>

Featured Image

Link: <https://www.edwardconard.com/wp-content/uploads/2023/09/Nate-Silver-.png>