Tweet: .@FiveThirtyEight analyst @geoffreyvs finds that Fetterman's margin of victory was provided by non-college white voters: Fetterman polled 7pp better than Biden in counties dominated by non-college whites.

Summary: John Fetterman bettered Biden's margin across almost the entire state on his way to defeating Republican Mehmet Oz by about 5 percentage points, his largest improvements over Biden tended to be in red-leaning counties with higher shares of white residents without a college degree. In counties with a population that's at least 60 percent white without a college degree — which together produced about 36 percent of the state's 2022 vote — Fetterman's margin was 7 points better than Biden's, on average, compared with just 3 points better elsewhere.
