Tweet: The United States added 36 Chinese firms to a trade blacklist as it expands export controls targeted at slowing Chinese development of advanced chips and technologies for military uses such as hypersonic weapons. @FT

Summary: The US has placed three dozen Chinese companies on a trade blacklist, in another escalation of its effort to slow China's development of advanced chips and technologies for military uses such as hypersonic weapons. The commerce department put 36 Chinese groups on the "entity list", a move that means American companies will require extremely hard-to-obtain licenses to export critical technologies to those customers in China.
