Tweet: 28% of American adults are religiously unaffiliated, describing themselves as atheist, agnostic or "nothing in particular" up from 16% in 2007. @pewresearch

Summary: About 28% of U.S. adults are religiously unaffiliated, describing themselves as atheists, agnostics, or "nothing in particular" when asked about their religion. Pew's survey data shows: Most "nones" believe in God or another higher power. But very few go to religious services regularly. Most say religion does some harm, but many also think it does some good. They are not uniformly anti-religious. Most "nones" reject the idea that science can explain everything. But they express more positive views of science than religiously affiliated Americans do.
