

Macro Roundup Article

Headline: The 6,670-Vote Majority: How Republicans Barely Won the House

Article Link: <https://www.insideelections.com/news/article/the-6670-vote-majority-how-republicans-barely-won-the-house>

Author(s)	Jacob Rubashkin
Publication	Inside Elections
Publication Date	December 16, 2022

Tweet: House races are getting more competitive according to an analysis by @JacobRubashkin. The Republican house majority rests on 6,670 votes, the cumulative margin of the 5 closest seats the Democrats lost that would have allowed them to hold the house.

Summary: The historical narrowness of the incoming GOP majority becomes clear when comparing this cycle to previous elections over the past decade. House Republicans won the majority by 6,670 votes, or 0.006 percent of the nationwide popular vote. Had Democrats won an additional 6,671 votes across five districts, they would have maintained their majority. In 2020, Democrats won 222 seats. But their majority rested on the 34,734-vote combined margin of victory in their five closest victories. Those decisive votes were just 0.023 percent of the 152,576,055 ballots cast nationwide.

Primary Topic: Politics

Topics: Op-Ed/Blog Post, Politics, Sell-by Date

Permalink: <https://www.edwardconard.com/macro-roundup/house-races-are-getting-more-competitive-according-to-an-analysis-by-jacobrubashkin-the-republican-house-majority-rests-on-6670-votes-the-cumulative-margin-of-the-5-closest-seats-the-democrats-los?view=detail>

Featured Image

Link: <https://www.edwardconard.com/wp-content/uploads/2022/12/12.16.22-GOP.jpg>