

Macro Roundup Article

Headline: Half Anchored

Article Link: <https://fedguy.com/half-anchored/>

Author(s)	Joseph Wang
Publication	Fed Guy Blog
Publication Date	October 17, 2023

Tweet: While median inflationary expectations are settling close to 2%, @FedGuy12 writes that inflation expectations are at risk of becoming unanchored, as 40% of recent @NewYorkFed respondents think inflation will be > 4% in the medium term.

Summary: Widely followed households surveys find that median inflation expectations are trending towards 2%, but they also show that the median is fragile. The New York Fed's Survey of Consumer Expectations, a monthly survey of a nationally representative group of 1300, finds that around 40% of respondents expect inflation to be higher than 4% in the medium term. That result is notably higher than pre-2020 levels and has remained stable to rising over the past several months. A potential spike in commodity prices from geopolitical developments could very quickly push inflation upward and tip median expectations comfortably above 2%. A shift in expectations is not yet happening, but it would almost certainly prompt aggressive policy action. Related: Inflation Expectations, the Phillips Curve, and Stock Prices and What We've Learned About Inflation and Rate Cuts

Primary Topic: Inflation

Topics: GDP, Inflation, Monetary Policy, Op-Ed/Blog Post

Permalink: <https://www.edwardconard.com/macro-roundup/while-median-inflationary-expectations-are-settling-close-to-2-fedguy12-writes-that-inflation-expectations-are-at-risk-of-becoming-unanchored-as-40-of-recent-newyorkfed-respondents-think-inflation?view=detail>

Featured Image

Link: <https://www.edwardconard.com/wp-content/uploads/2023/10/Half-Anchored.png>